FEAR TEMPLE CO-ED MAY BE KIDNAPPED; MYSTERIOUS CALLS

Julia R. Fellman, 18, Daughter of Deceased Banker, Disappears

ENLIST AID OF POLICE

Started On Shopping Tour; Last Seen Yesterday at 1.25 p. m.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—Fearing she may have been kidnapped, police here today pressed an intensive search for Julia R. Fellman, 18 year old Temple University co-ed and daughter of the late William Fellman, Jr., a banker. Culminating a series of mysterious telephone calls to her home, the girl vanished yesterday afternoon after luncheon at the university. She was ostensibly starting out on a shopping tour when last seen at 1.25 p. m. Her brother, William Fellman, 2nd, enlisted the aid of the police late last night. A teletype message was broadcast to authorities of 12 eastern states asking them to be on the look-out for the missing co-ed.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Fellman, told police she knew of no reason why her daughter would want to leave home. She expressed the fear Julia may have been abducted.

Tracing the background behind the girl's disappearance, authorities learned that she had received recently, several mysterious telephone calls. The nature of these calls was not learned.

Burlington Tax Rate To Drop, It Is Predicted

BURLINGTON, N. J., Feb. 20.—At an adjourned meeting of Common Council last evening the budget for 1935 was unanimously passed on first reading. The total amount of the budget this year is $174,246, an increase of $283. The amount to be raised by taxation is $70,534, a decrease of $13,178.15. There was an increase of $9,000 in surplus revenue, the amount last year being $20,000.

Last year $5,000 was received from liquor licenses and this year double that amount will be taken in. The interest on bonds for 1935 will decrease by $5,000, while the same amount applies to bonds maturing.

The poor and emergency relief appropriation took a big jump this year, being $10,600. This is an increase of $3,000. The former appropriation for CWA work was $7,000, while none was set aside this year. An appropriation of $4,000 was made for the collection of delinquent taxes and foreclosures.

Council named Dr. Fred Lucas and Dr. J. Preston Moore as city physicians. The Burlington City Loan and Trust Company was designated for the deposit of all city funds.

DOYLESTOWN CONSIDERS OWN LIGHT PLANT

Pays Over $12,000 Yearly For Lights and Power Now

PLAN DEISEL ENGINE

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 20.—Borough council took an account of stock Monday night with the idea of giving the town several much-needed improvements. The decision to prepare to make improvements was reached after each councilman had been presented with a slip of paper showing a long list of things that can be done under the provisions of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works.

Surveys will be made and the necessary reports sent to Harrisburg. If federal funds become available for the projects suggested by Borough Council it will then be possible to go ahead and make the improvements locally.

Motions were passed unanimously, authorizing the proper committees of Council to forward applications immediately to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, for a complete spray plant and cover for the drying beds at the sewer plant; and "East End" sewerage extension and the purchase of a Deisel engine for the borough water works, where $4500 a year is now being spent for "juice."

President A. Harry Clayton pointed out the fact that the proposed surveys do not mean that Doylestown will get all the improvements suggested, but it will mean that the town will be in line for such improvements after Federal funds become available.

After a lengthy discussion as to the advisability of erecting a proposed lock-up or police station in the central section of the town, it was the unanimous opinion of Council members that such action would not be at all fair. Anywhere but in a residential section, was the viewpoint taken by Council members.

Council members took the stand that the Fire House is not fitted for a lock-up and in addition to that, Shewell avenue residents have been voicing protests against such a proposition for the past three days.

However, Doylestown is going to have a lock-up, or an "over-night bunk house," where over-nighters can be cared for—if it does not cost too much.

This lock-up is to be located on borough property near the water works. The building will in all probability be constructed of concrete blocks and will be made large enough to house cell room with a dozen bunks. It is proposed to lose no time in erecting this lock-up. Council authorized that the borough property and police committees secure immediately plans, and estimates of cost of erection to be presented at the March meeting of Council.

Every member of Council seemed willing to see the lock-up proposition go through since the county has issued orders that over-nighters will no longer be cared for at the County Prison, as it is the duty of the borough to take care of those not charged with crime. Incidentally, Doylestown is about the only borough of its size in this section of the State that does not have a lock-up.

Because of the type of criminal now incarcerated in the County Prison, several of whom are charged with murder, the County Commissioners announced the ban on over-nighters.

Considerable time was devoted to a discussion of the proposition that Doylestown some day will have its own municipal electric plant. Councilman George Willard was of the opinion that the proposition should be seriously considered in the survey of the Federal Administration of Public Works, even though it may take five or six years to accomplish it.

Doylestown pays an electric and power bill of over $12,000 a year. This amount, all Council members agreed, is too high. The town-owned plant would cost a great deal of money, and it is likely to be far in the distance because of present economic conditions.

The purchase of a Deisel engine to operate the water works machinery will, however, be taken seriously. The electric bill at the water works alone is $4500 annually. This can be cut down more than one-third, according to Councilman Willard, who is personally acquainted with what the Deisel engine can do.

Courier's homemakers school, February 27th, 28th and March 1st in Mutual Aid hall, Wood street, between Jefferson and Lincoln avenues, at 2.00 p. m.

WOMEN OF THIS SECTION EAGERLY AWAIT THE ANNUAL COOKING SCHOOL TO BE SPONSORED BY COURIER ON FEB. 27TH, 28TH AND MARCH 1ST

Miss Vera A. Schneider Will Demonstrate on Stage at Mutual Aid Hall

THREE DAILY SESSIONS

Will Have Many New Experiments to Explain to The Women Attending

The women of lower Bucks County are keenly awaiting the opening of the Courier's cooking school which will hold its first session on Wednesday, February 27th, Thursday, February 28th, and Friday, March 1st, in Mutual Aid Hall, Wood street, above Jefferson avenue. The hours of the sessions will be from two until four o'clock.

Kitchen work, cooking, cleaning, etc., might prove to be very monotonous. This is especially true when the homemaker has to do it day in and day out in the same old way.

This is one of the reasons the Courier is sponsoring a cooking school.

The Mutual Aid hall has been engaged and every homemaker who can poibly go is invited to attend all three sessions, and these sessions will be held from 2.00 to 4.00 p. m.

Vera A. Schneider, who is to conduct the school, is going to bring to this community some new methods of performing household duties, new equipment for the performing, together with new recipes and menus.

Every woman who is interested in her home—and what woman is not—will be interested in every minute of every session of the Courier cooking school.

Miss Schneider has a model kitchen where she experiments constantly with foods and with new equipment for home use. It is her experience in her model kitchen that she is bringing here. Most homemakers are too busy to experiment. They have to go too quickly from one meal into the preparation of another. Then, too, many homemakers do not have the facilities for experimenting.

Since the announcement of the Courier cooking school, which is absolutely free, many homemakers in this vicinity have expressed themselves enthusiastically at the prospect of the three day school.

HAUPTMANN CONFIDENT

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 20.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann is confident he will be out of the death house by Easter, it was learned today. In spite of the fact the convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby has but one last hope—the Court of Errors and Appeals—his guards declared he is cheerful and constantly mentions his faith in his ultimate freedom to other death-house inmates.

Meanwhile, it is expected that the difficulties between Hauptmann's two attorneys, C. Lloyd Fisher of Flemington, and Edward J. Reilly, of Brooklyn, will be ironed out at a conference here tomorrow and both lawyers will then work in harmony in their effort to gain a new trial for the Bronx carpenter.

Hauptmann's execution, scheduled for the week of March 18th, was automatically pushed back at least until June, today, as a result of Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard's order making the State pay the costs of printing a transcript of his trial. Justice Trenchard's order assured a review of Hauptmann's case by the Court of Errors and Appeals at the next term of the court, some time between March 28th and May 21st.

FIRE LOSS LOWEST HERE IN PAST SEVEN YEARS

Three Less Alarms Answered in 1934 Than During 1933

INSPECTIONS ARE AN AID

Bristol had the lowest fire loss in 1934 that it has experienced for seven years.

The fire loss last year in Bristol Borough was $3,630, while in 1933 the total was $5,630, or $2,000 more than last year. The total number of alarms answered last year was three less than the year previous. Periodic inspection of properties coupled with the efficiency of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department is given credit for this reduction in loss. Under the superintendency of James L. McGee of the Department of Safety, periodic inspection of properties is made and recommendations made and enforced for the abatement of fire hazards. This has done much to bring the total of loss down to the low figure of last year. A comparison of fire losses in Bristol over a seven year period shows the following:

1928, loss $19,096.50; 1929, $40,870; 1930, $13,070; 1931, $5,205; 1932, $5,960; 1933, $5,630; 1934, $3,630.

Through the periodic inspections it is believed that the residents here have been made fire-conscious, and in this way eliminate many hazards which otherwise have existed.

Of the 118 alarms answered in 1934, 46 of them were for grass and rubbish fires; 26 of the alarms were for property fires, and the department answered nine calls out of town. Twelve automobiles and trucks were afire, and there were six false alarms. Six times during the year the department was called but services were not required. Out of the total loss of $3,630, $2,830 was loss on property, while there was an $800 loss on contents.

Fish and Game Enthusiasts Enjoy Motion Pictures

About 200 enthusiastic members of the Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association and friends thoroughly enjoyed an instructive and amusing moving picture shown in the assembly room of the Elks' Home last evening, through the courtesy of Theodore Megargee.

Mr. Megargee's reels depicted fishing scenes in the Catalina Island area and were thrilling and instructive and often very amusing, showing methods employed in the so-called sport of hooking and landing large fish, including the different varieties of man-eating sharks, and also the modern method of harpooning the monster whale by means of the harpoon-equipped gun. This picture showed the capture of the second largest whale ever taken. These reels were by Mack Sennett.

Field and Stream furnished a series of reels illustrating hunting the giant Grizzly, shooting the Black Mallard, and hunting quail at the home of Mary Montrose. The duck shooting seemed popular as many oh's and ah's were heard when nice flocks of ducks were seen approaching the blinds of the hunters.

Many of the pictures were accompanied by phonographic talks and comments of the pictures shown on the screen.

On March 19th at the same place and through the courtesy of Mr. Megargee, a series of reels taken by Budd Marten, of Burlington, N. J., will be shown, depicting hunting big game in Alaska and Northern Canada.

Preceding the movie show a business meeting was held and a resolution presented by J. Phil Betz was unanimously adopted petitioning Governor Earle and the new Board of Game Protectors to retain Game Protector Warren G. Fretz in his present position as a merit of esteem for his faithful and conscientious conduct and the impartial and courageous spirit he has shown in protecting and furthering the interests of the law abiding sportsmen.

The game committee, through its chairman, Thomas Scott, reported the purchase of sixteen cock and twenty hen ring-neck pheasants, and also three Mutant or black-necked cock pheasants, all of which will be liberated as soon as conditions are suitable.

Seven new members were added at this meeting, which brings the membership to two hundred.

Guests were present from Holmesburg and Morrisville Fish and Game Associations.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ennis, Bath street, were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dooley, Philadelphia.

JUDGE TELLS JURY HE THINKS THEY DID WRONG THING

Acquitted John C. Duddy of Breaking and Entering Railroad Cars

TO STAY OUT OF BUCKS

Truck Driver Found Guilty of Involuntary Manslaughter Charge

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 20.—Judge Keller, in commenting on the verdict of a jury that acquitted John C. Duddy, of Philadelphia, on a charge of breaking and entering railroad cars at the Green Lane yards at Bristol, said, "I think the jury did the wrong thing, but that is for them to decide," and then warned Duddy to "keep out of Bucks county."

After entering a plea of nolle-contendere to a charge of involuntary manslaughter in the Bucks county criminal court yesterday, Charles G. Lowe, 33, of Burlington, N. C., a truck driver for a well known company was adjudged guilty as indicted by President Judge Hiram H. Keller.

Lowe was driving a truck that was implicated in an accident on the Lincoln Highway, a mile west of Morrisville in front of the Vagabond Inn early on the morning of October 9, 1934, in which John Testa, another truck driver, was fatally injured. Testa died in the Mercer Hospital at Trenton on October 13.

Judge Keller suspended sentence on Lowe on condition that he pay the costs and placed him on probation for two years with County Detective Antonio Russo, of Bristol, as probation officer.

Lowe, it was testified, was an experienced truck driver and had been in that business for fifteen years without an accident.

Dr. Ferdinand Engelhart, interne at the Trenton hospital where Testa died, testified that Testa died from a fractured skull.

Samuel Handfinger, of 520 Green street, Philadelphia, another truck driver, was the second Commonwealth witness. He testified that on the morning in question, between 1 and 1.15, he was driving a large truck along the Lincoln Highway toward Philadelphia. The morning was clear and the roads were dry. He was alone in the truck.

Handfinger said that another truck was proceeding in front of him in the same direction, a truck owned by the same company and operated by John Testa who was fatally injured.

"Testa's truck came to a stop in front of me and I stopped my truck about five feet in the rear of his," Handfinger testified.

"We got out of our trucks and walked over to a service station to get a screw driver. When we came out, both of us walked between our trucks and that is all that I knew until I arrived at the hospital. My rear lights were lighted—two electric lights and a red lantern—for I looked when I first got out of the truck."

Joseph Brady, who works at the Vagabond Inn, testified that he saw two men lying in the highway in front of the place.

Morris Lempelgar, of Trenton, testified that he was seated in an automobile outside the Vagabond Station and heard a crash in the highway. He said that he heard yells for help and then saw that a third truck had come from behind and struck the truck driven by Handfinger, forcing it into the Testa truck. Testa and Handfinger were caught between their two trucks after the third truck driven by the defendant, collided. The witness said that he saw lights on the rear of the Handfinger truck as he passed it going from Trenton to the Vagabond Inn.

Corporal R. D. Evans, of the South Langhorne sub-station, who investigated the accident testified that no flares were shown in the rear of the Handfinger truck after it had stopped on the highway, as required by law.

In his own defense, Lowe testified that something loomed up

LEGISLATIVE EXPERIMENTS

The Nebraska idea is spreading. According to a statement made by the executive director of the American Legislators Association, reduction in the size of state legislative bodies is now proposed in at least 20 states. Though retention of the two-house form, with appreciable downward revision in numbers of senators and assemblymen, is proposed in Montana and Michigan, 18 other states have before them bills to limit legislative assemblies to one house.

In California, Delaware, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Missouri, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming legislation has already been drafted providing for single-chamber legislatures resembling the Nebraska amendment or Norris plan, which becomes effective January 2, 1937.

Most of the bills proposing unicameral legislatures would limit the size of the new body to from 30 to 50 members. In a number of cases, this would mean a reduction in legislative personnel of about 75 per cent. Montana would limit the aggregate salaries to $37,000, equally divided among the legislators; South Dakota would appropriate $35,000 for aggregate salaries, and Wyoming, $30,000.

By the terms of a bill before the Washington legislature, each of the 24 proposed legislators would supervise some state department as a full-time position at a monthly salary of $400. This is the most drastic of the proposed reductions in legislative personnel, the legislature now being composed of 99 members of the house and 46 members of the senate.

SLOWLY GETTING THERE

Peaceful, law-abiding, self-controlled folk are not a product of definitions of right and wrong. They are the results of breeding, of the process of evolution. The criminal class of today is greatly superior in morality and intellect to the highest type men of the stone age, and it is not unreasonable to suppose that another hundred thousand years will find the lowest class of that future age superior in all ways to the highest type of this.

Society appears to have done its full duty in the matter of reforming mankind. Through a thousand agencies it has defined right and wrong. It can do no more.

A man of the highest type the race has developed will not strike his child in the face with a club, nor will he lie in wait and shoot another man who carries a large sum of money.

He may be angry at his child and he may covet money, but he will not beat the one or steal the other. The thing that restrains him is not the knowledge that these things are wrong, but the fact that he is a gentleman—that is, a gentle man instead of a brute man.

It is not by an exercise of will that he refrains from doing these evils; he has outgrown the urge to do them.

A man of a lower type who does these things is not ignorant of the fact that he is doing wrong. He does wrong deliberately and in many cases without compunction. He follows the urge of his brutish instincts.

Urge Growers to Sell Tomatoes in Open Market

Harvey E. Stewart & Son, have an advertisement in the Courier telling farmers that there will be a market established at Bridgeboro, N. J., where they can sell their 1935 crop of canning house tomatoes on the open market.

Mr. Stewart has bought tomatoes in the country and on the Philadelphia market for the past 32 years and has kept an accurate account of the markets each year in regards to the price of contract tomatoes and those sold on the open market. He finds that during this period he has bought tomatoes as low as 15c per basket and as high as $1.25 per basket for the canners, and taking the whole time through, the prices will average more than any contractor has paid.

His advice to the farmers this year in particular is to grow all the tomatoes they can and to sell them on the open market to the highest bidder. "The canners all over the country are practically sold out of tomatoes as well as other commodities, and I believe this will be one of the best years for canning house tomatoes that we have had for a long time."

Mr. Stewart has made arrangements for prompt attention to those bringing tomatoes to the market, and the long, tedious hours of waiting in line will be eliminated.

"More Money"

by CHARLES GRANT

(Note: The financial details contained in this novel, while purely fictional, have been testified to as accurate and convincing by B. C. Forbes, Editor of Forbes Magazine, and distinguished financial writer; and by Henry F. Pringle, who has recently investigated the activities of Ivar Kreuger, Hugo Stinnes and Alfred Lowenstein.)

CHAPTER I

The great Jasper H. Ingram needed money. More money. Sixty million dollars, in fact.

The amount did not startle him. His dreams were too vast to be measured in terms of dollars. Since his projects demanded more money, he had but to ask and it would be produced for him. He had little reason to fear that this new financing would not be accomplished.

Yet, as he stood looking out of the window of his private office on the forty-second floor of the Ingram building, he thought for a moment of the seeming incongruity of Jasper Ingram being in need of more money. His wealth, interests, and resources were so boundless. But it always had been like this; this urgent pressure for more money.

From the time he had started to make his own way, to escape from the bitterness of his early poverty, needing a few dollars more a week—and getting it—there was that constant and irresistible impulse to forge ahead.

He smiled now, as he recalled the time he thought a hundred dollars a month was the biggest salary in the world. Then, after a while, the feeling that if he could earn as much as ten thousand a year he would have achieved life's most bountiful promise. Only to find that wasn't so. Increasing wealth brought with it increasing demands. More money. Always more money.

How he had looked to the men with millions, envying them, fancying their problems solved—that they were at last absolved from worries and longings. How mistaken he had been! But when was it he had ceased to think of money as money and had seen it as power, as the leverage with which gigantic undertakings could be swung irresistibly forward? Time, uncertain; but the creative impulse back of the change, definite and obvious.

As he turned from the window, his confidential secretary, Homer Alsbaugh, entered the room and stood respectfully waiting the great man's commands.

Take Alsbaugh, thought Ingram, as he moved toward the table at which he worked—a steady, safe, dependable yes-man, getting ten thousand a year—and satisfied. Paying for a home in the suburbs for himself and his exceedingly pretty wife, who was inclined to be flirtatious. What of it? Most young women were, these days. Alsbaugh, Ingram was sure, had little worry about the need for more money.

After acknowledging Alsbaugh's good morning greeting, Ingram said, "We can go ahead with the expansion plans. Osgood has committed his group to the flotation of a sixty-million bond issue. They're settling the thing now. Osgood should call any moment."

Alsbaugh shook his head in profound admiration. Who but Jasper H. Ingram, in these dark days, could ask for sixty million dollars—and get it! But he said simply:

"That's fine," Mr. Ingram. "But naturally no surprise to me."

Yet, behind this lip service, enthusiastic though it sounded, Alsbaugh felt a twinge of envy—a stirring of something surprisingly like resentment. Why should the powerfully rich have such ease in adding to their fortunes, while such as he was always so pressed? Obviously, Ingram had not correctly analyzed his obsequious employee.

Money! More money! Jasper Ingram able to raise new millions for the expansion of vast holdings, while he Homer Alsbaugh, would have a devil of a time getting an extension of the mortgage on his home. Banks weren't renewing mortgages in these times. Not for men of his financial standing.

No worry about the need for more money Ingram had thought. But!— for money. True, a few years earlier he would have thought no man could ever feel hard up on the liberal salary he was receiving. But now—oh, well, it might still be all right if Marian weren't so extravagant!

A gentle buzz from Mr. Ingram's private telephone interrupted his meditations. As he listened and watched, he knew that Osgood, ostensibly Ingram's banker but actually his financial wheel horse, was on the wire.

"It's all set," was Ingram's only comment to Alsbaugh. The fingers of his left hand drummed on the arm of his chair, his nostrils dilated slightly, but he gave no other sign of triumph.

Alsbaugh's imagination was too limited for him to grasp the free-holdings he called up Osgood, or some other banker, and got the money to carry out his plans. Poor little Alsbaugh, blind to the sweep of genius, ready to think that, were he Ingram, he too could guide the destiny of great enterprise.

So for a long moment he stood there watching his chief in silence. Then he asked:

"Is there anything else, Mr. Ingram?"

"What say? Oh, yes. Miss Peters is away. Has a cold. I'll need some one to take dictation. Send me in the most intelligent girl you have—if any." As he went out, Alsbaugh paid smiling tribute to the ancient jest.

Entering a big room where a dozen stenographers sat at noiseless machines, he unhesitatingly ap-

"Ready for a pleasant surprise, young lady? Opportunity—that's what I'm bringing you," Alsbaugh said.

and intricate pattern of Jasper Ingram's gigantic dreams.

Jasper Ingram worked alone. All those who were associated with him—bankers and promoters and members of his board of directors—were to become lesser Ingrams, but they were never admitted to his holy of holies where the fire of his unlimited ambition burned.

He was a dreamer, but his dreams were practical. He kept his eyes on a vision of the future yet held his mind to the sound practical details of the immediate issue—one small unit at a time. To control power you simply bought, or bought into, a local power and light company. You recapitalized and formed a holding company. Acquire in the same way a dozen or more strategically located. Soon you could cover the country!

One unit at a time: A coal mine. A pipe line for oil. A pipe line for natural gas.

One unit at a time: A railroad. A bus line. An air line. A Great Lakes shipping line.

One unit at a time: A small radio station. Merge it with others; make it the basis for the coming radio telephone.

Power! Transportation! Communication!

To unify and control. That was Ingram's dream. Overwhelming and simple. Holding companies. Voting trusts. Investment trusts.

To Jasper H. Ingram there was nothing complicated or involved in these ramifications. To Homer Alsbaugh they simply were beyond comprehension.

All Alsbaugh knew was that when Ingram wanted to add to his proached a girl whose fingers played over the keyboard of her typewriter with a quick, musical precision.

If Jasper Ingram had stipulated for the services of the prettiest girl, it was here that Alsbaugh must have stopped. But the dark blue eyes Cathleen McCarthy raised to his held in their depths intelligence as well as beauty. Her broad brows testified to strength of character, that was saved from austerity by her firm, but kissable, lips.

Not that Alsbaugh was likely to reduce the appearance of any woman to such psychological conclusions. No, indeed. To him, any girl with pleasing features and a good figure was "a beauty who ought to be on the stage." That's how he regarded Cathleen McCarthy, though he did acknowledge her brains.

"Ready for a pleasant surprise, young lady? Opportunity—that's what I'm bringing you," he said.

Cathleen didn't like Alsbaugh's manner, but she favored him with an inquiring smile.

"Mr. Ingram asked me to send some one to take his letters! Miss Peters is out with a cold. Lord knows when she'll be back. A girl who could do her work and give satisfaction—well, there is no telling how far she might go. Naturally, I thought of you right away, Miss McCarthy. I've been watching your work—and you, too."

"That's nice of you," said Cathleen.

"Don't forget who gave you your big chance," he cautioned her as he patted her lightly on her shoulder.

LOCAL CITIZEN FINDS BELL HONEY KRUSHED WHEAT BREAD BIG BENEFIT TO HEALTH

Discovers Long Needed Digestion Regulator Enabling Him To Continue Strenuous Work. Read His Letter Below.

The advocates of violent exercises as an aid to digestion, frequently overlook the fact that people often require bowel stimulation even though they work long hours. A local truck driver found his long rides, continuously seated, retarded his elimination. He writes as follows:

"Through curiosity I purchased a loaf of your new Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread. I found this bread not only delicious but a big aid to my health. It was not unusual for me to take several physics a week. I felt groggy and sleepy on the job, had headaches often and my complexion was pale. I have eaten Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread for ten days and recommend it. It has kept me regular as clock work."

You practice real economy when you buy Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread. It's bread of known quality, preferred by thousands of discriminating, thrift-minded families for its purity, fine flavor, and high food value. But more than this, it is processed so that it digests very quickly and regulates impaired digestion and clogged intestines.

An idea! Wheat and honey! No more sugar, just the nectar of fruit and flowers for the necessary flavoring. Healthy? It's bound to be, and stimulating in a natural way to sluggish digestive organs. These features are tremendously important to good health. A child with poor or slow digestion needs the regulative qualities found in Bell Honey Krushed Wheat Bread. Elderly people who lack sufficient exercise. Workers in sedentary occupations, who sit or stand all day—there are literally millions of people who need its gentle natural action.

Buy it today. Try it ten days. You'll like the delicious flavor. Keep a supply on hand. You'll like it and it's good for you. Look for the cellophane wrapped loaf. Also look for the liberal coating of extra crushed wheat on its outer crust. It is sliced for easy serving.—(Advertisement)

ZULU JUNGLE GIANTS TO PLAY ST. ANN'S HERE

The St. Ann's A. A. basketball team will have its strongest lineup in action tomorrow night when the Purple and Gold quintet meets the fast Zulu Jungle Giants in one of the games of a double-header to be staged on the Italian Mutual Aid court. In the other contest, the Bristol A. A. team will play Trevoise A. A.

Manager Spadacino, of the Saints, intends to have the same lineup that carried the local team to a victory over the Tyco Reds in the Passon Tounon Tournament three weeks ago. He will use all of his players in an effort to score a victory over the jungleers who come here garbed in their native dress.

The Jungle Giants made an appearance here in basketball last season, playing the Hulmeville A. A. team. Now they come in basketball attire to give the local fandom a fine attraction. Two weeks ago, the Giants held the Magnolia A. A. team, of Bridesburg, to a 33-29 score. This same Magnolia team beat the St. Ann's five, 44-11.

High School Girls Defeat Southampton

In a fast, well-played game, the Bristol Girls last night defeated the Southampton team, 20-10, on the latter's home court.

From the beginning of the game Bristol proved better than her opponent. In the first few seconds of play, Faber got a field goal, which was followed by three more before quarter time. Throughout the first half, Southampton secured only two field goals.

In the second half the home team seemed to show more life, but they could not get past Bono and Ridge, the Bristol guards, who made a very fine showing for themselves.

Throughout the game both teams showed a fine display of passing and shooting. It was a clean game which was interesting to watch.

Faber was high scorer for Bristol with eight field goals and one foul shot for a total of 17 points. Severns and Johnson each had two field goals for their team.

This game was the last one of the season, and the last that many of the girls will play in their high school days. Those who will be graduated in June are: Louise Smoyer, Mary Smoyer, Arline Woolman, Grace Bono, Eleanor Dyer, Elizabeth Bellerby and Peggy Morrell. "Mickey Mouse," the team's many-colored mascot, has travelled to all the games. Someone always sees that "Mickey" is along. Some of the girls are superstitious, and once when the team got on the bus and found that "Mickey" was not there, they went back to the building for him. They declared they could not play if "Mickey" wasn't along.

ED (DON) GEORGE TO TRY AND PIN McCLARY DOWN

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 20—Ed (Don) George, recognized in New England and Canada as world's wrestling champion, will stop off at Trenton tonight and try to remove the biggest and most unpopular wrestler that has appeared here this season, Pat McClary, 263 pound Irishman.

George has perhaps the better title claim London, being wearer of the crown by victory over the undisputed champion, Gus Sonnenberg. George was then defeated by Strangler Lewis, who in turn was pinned by Henri De Glane. The handsome Don regained the title from DeGlane and has not been defeated since then, a period of three years. George subsequently pinned Lewis and Brown.

In an attempt to clear the title muddle, London and George met in Boston and grappled three and a half hours to a tired draw.

George is rated by experts to be the leading exponent of the modern grappling game. McClary, brawny and tremendously powerful, has aroused the ire of Arena fandom almost as much as the Dusek family. His decidedly "off color" tactics and his overbearing attitude in the ring have combined to make him a leading villain. However, there is no gainsaying that he is undefeated here. He scored his most spectacular victory last Wednesday when he pinned gigantic Wee Willie Davis in 15 minutes.

Old favorites and new will supply the fireworks in the supporting bouts. Al (Busy) Bisignano, clever Italian-American, will face the daring Stan Sokolis, expert flying tackler, in the 45 minute semi-windup, one fall to decide. Dr. Harry Fields, 250-pound medical student, will clash with the clever veteran, Frank Judson, and in the opener, rowdy John Swenski tussles with Henry Piers, classy Hollander.

SOUTHAMPTON FIVE STOPS BRISTOL HIGH

By Jack Orr

B. H. S. Press Representative
SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 20—In the midst of a five game winning streak, the Cardinal and Gray of Bristol High met up with Bill Robinson and Walt Gillespie, Southampton basketballers extraordinary, who furnished twenty points between them which in itself spelled victory for the Blue and White. The final count read 28-16.

Robinson and Gillespie who are almost conceded the positions of guard and center on the mythical Lower Bucks County League Five, gave a fine exhibition of shooting and passing to sweep the visiting quintet off their feet.

Gillespie was moved to guard in this fray and showed he can handle the apple at any position he is needed. Robinson on the other hand is well on his way to a shot on the all-league five for the third consecutive year.

The Southampton defense held the Cardinal and Gray aggregation to a trio of field goals during the entire game. A twin pointer by Phil Carnvale was the lone basket in the first half.

The Blue and White contributed eleven field counters, five coming from Gillespie and a trio from Captain Robinson. The "Phils" of Southampton also converted six free throws.

Phil Carnvale for the third game in a row was high man for Bristol with a lone field goal but making his three charity throws count.

Gillespie with a quintet of shots from the field and a pair of tosses from the 15-foot mark led the home-sters.

On Friday Burlington will play host to the Cardinal and Gray in a non-league affair in a return match with their across-the-river foes.

Starring the brilliant Katharine Hepburn, Sir James M. Barrie's much-loved romance, "The Little Minister," comes to the talking picture screen, as a vibrant, actionful and deeply moving romance.

Never before has Miss Hepburn been afforded as colorful and dynamic a role as that of Babbie in "The Little Minister." The dashing, romantic gypsy girl, long enshrined in the hearts of the world, is perfect human material for the rich talents of the star.

John Boal, one of the finest of Hollywood's younger actors, is seen as Gavinn Dishart, the little dominie whom Babbie loves. Alan Hale is the temperamental ruffian Rob Dow. The talented Frank Conroy plays Lord Rintoul, her guardian.
